ELIZABETH PRELOGAR

JIM CLYBURN

Jim Clyburn is a delegate originally from the United States. He thinks that the second amendment regarding gun ownership, should be kept, but reconsidered, as it has become a law that harms non-American ethnic groups

Steve Scalise is an American delegate, that "loves the second amendment" (said directly by Scalise to the interviewer). He does have a story to tell. He tells the interviewer that once, he was shot at a baseball game. And other gun owners shot back to the original aggressor, in term, saving Scalise's life

Conclusions:

As you can see from the interviewed, the position on the second amendment is always for it to be kept, specially by those citizens who are americans, just as the 3 interviewed delegates. But, from these interviews, you could also come to the conclusions that many of the delegates are fighting for a legislation without a cause. without something to back up their opinions. And ironically, the only person who has a real reason to support their position, is the one of violence. So, this leaves people to ask themselves: Is violence justified? The Bureau will keep viewers updated.
